

Explore the Green-Duwamish River!

Close-up of Green-Duwamish map - Map design/GIS Michele Savelle

The Green-Duwamish Watershed map is complete and ready for distribution!

The map project has been a collaborative, 18-month long project coordinated by Duwamish River Cleanup Coalition (DRCC) and the Environmental Coalition of South Seattle (ECOSS). The colorful map is designed to raise awareness and public involvement within the Green-Duwamish watershed, and includes information about parks and public access sites, habitat restoration, history, public art, and information about the pollution and cleanup of the river, with helpful tips on reducing household toxins.

The map also serves to illustrate the "current conditions" of the watershed, as a base for helping the river's diverse communities envision what the future could look like. The Duwamish River Cleanup Coalition hosted a 'future visioning' workshop series, with workshops in Georgetown, West Seattle, South Park and other locations, resulting in a future Vision Map, released to the public in August 2008. The Vision Map will be used to guide the ongoing Superfund cleanup of the Duwamish, to make sure that the cleanup is aligned with the future goals and needs of the community. View the Vision Map at:
